Alaska Pacific University 2021-2022 Annual Report

From the President and the Foundation Chair

Dear Alaska Pacific University Community and Friends,

This past year was an exciting time marked by significant growth for APU. Enrollment in 2021-22 was the highest in six years. We expanded Nursing programs to off-campus locations, including Bethel and Utqiagvik, and implemented the state's only program leading to Licensed Practical Nurse certification. We launched an undergraduate program in Community and Place-based Education. Our commitment to research and community engagement programs with Indigenous communities throughout the North was also enhanced with the launch of the Navigating the New Arctic Community Office.

Financially, APU remains in good health. Despite low market returns in FY22, APU operated within budget and weathered the impact of low investment revenue. APU received over $7 million in combined federal and private grants and gifts. Donors helped endow new scholarships for our students, and the commitment of over $3 million in scholarships and institutional aid supported students in achieving their goals through attending APU.

As the Annual Report illustrates, the entire APU community has been committed to the strategic plan and good stewardship of the university's resources. I was honored to join the team this June in the position of President. This report highlights the many accomplishments of FY22, but we are not done yet. The future of Alaska Pacific University is bright; we will continue to work to provide quality education while leading innovation in serving our students and communities.

Thank you!

Dr. Janelle Vanasse, President

Dear APU Community and Friends,

Over the past 28 years, the tremendous growth of the APU Foundation (APUF) is a statement to the investment the APU community has in the future of the University. In FY22 alone, the APU community added three new endowments and raised $162,000 in donations for APUF. Donor-funded endowments help to ensure APU students receive an exceptional educational experience.

This spring, APU will host its third annual Blue & Gold Benefit and Auction fundraiser with the sole purpose of growing APUF. With the increasing success of the annual auction, we are not just discussing the future of APU, we are investing in it. Our goal is to advance the APU Foundation to meet the growing scholarship and institutional aid needs of our expanding student body while continuing to support the university as it improves the overall student experience through renovations of its aging infrastructure and program improvements.

We are grateful for your continued support as we meet the current needs of our students while planning to meet the needs of the future classes as well.

Sincerely,

Chris Swalling, Board Chair
Alaska Pacific University Foundation

Faculty Spotlight

APU's faculty provides state-of-the-art classroom instruction and hands-on, culturally responsive teaching and learning.

Roman Dial, Institute of Culture & Environment

For the past several years, Dr. Roman Dial has researched tree lines in northern Alaska. His undergraduate students may spend 99 days straight in the backcountry, gathering data on foot and by pack raft from Canada to Kotzebue. That hands-on research has now produced an open-access publication in Nature, one of the world's most renowned, most highly cited, and most widely read scientific publications. "We couldn't have done this without APU students," Dial said. "Collecting data across 2,500 kilometers of tree line requires a lot of time on the tundra. Our students get an incredible summer in the Brooks Range, while the rest of us get a clearer picture of our changing climate."

Marianne Murray, Institute of Health & Wellness

In 2022, two of APU's nursing programs, the Associate's Degree in Nursing (ADN) and RN to BSN program, received accreditation from the Accreditation Commission for Education in Nursing, ACEN. ACEN representatives singled out APU's nursing programs for their emphasis on community experiences and projects concerning Indigenous knowledge as an area of strength. "This accreditation is a mark of quality, assuring our students and future employers that our program provides excellent training relevant to Alaska," said Dr. Marianne Murray, Director of Nursing. The university's Licensed Practical Nursing (LPN) program hosted an in-person accreditation visit in September, with expected results in early spring 2023.

Lincoln Garrick, Institute of Business & Public Policy

Everyone loves a good TED Talk! Ted Talks, influential videos from expert speakers in their field, became a phenomenon over thirty years ago to promote "ideas worth spreading." Director of APU's Graduate Business programs and Assistant Professor of Business, Lincoln Garrick, participated in the 2022 TEDxAnchorage series themed "You don't know what you don't know." Drawing on personal insight and students' leadership perceptions, Garrick delivered his talk "Learning from Bad Behavior" on how to be an effective leader by avoiding toxic traits. Utilizing his passion as a mountaineer as a metaphor, Garrick recommends identifying anti-mentors which he informs are "the kind that keeps you away from disaster."

APU Impact

Students are the center of APU. We recognize that every student has an opportunity to improve their future and change the world.

Trixie Bennett

With the tagline "absorbable, adorable, affordable," Ali and Trixie Bennett '21 created Alaskan Wildlings LLC, a cloth diaper company based in Ketchikan. Though the idea belongs to Ali, her mother Trixie guided the company's growth with her business background from APU. Trixie focused on the company for her senior project in 2021 and won multiple awards in UAA's Business Plan Competition. APU professors provided Trixie with skills to share with her Tribal community, particularly "the value of business planning as a tool," she said. Thanks to flexible business courses, Trixie completed her APU degree remotely from Ketchikan. Alaskan Wildlings continues to grow. (Photo: UAA College of Business and Public Policy)

Hannah Halvorsen

Harvard has welcomed APU alumna, Hannah Halvorsen to join their Nordic Ski team. She will serve as the program's assistant coach. Head coach, Chris City stated, "As an Olympian and long-time US Ski Team skier, Hannah brings a wealth of experience competing at the highest levels of our sport. Her knowledge of training, technique, and racing will be a tremendous asset to our student-athletes as we prepare for the season ahead." Halvorsen was a prominent member of the U.S. National Team and competed on the world stage at the 2022 Winter Olympics. This will be Halvorsen's first coaching position at the collegiate level.

Napaskiak Visit

In March, four APU Environmental Public Health (EPH) students traveled to the Native Village of Napaskiak in southwest Alaska, a traditional Yup'ik community just up the Kuskokwim River from Bethel. The visit was coordinated by Joe Sarcone, director of APU's EPH program. Napaskiak experiences significant public health and infrastructure challenges including a lack of piped water and sewer, an open dump site, and water delivery and wastewater collection services. This visit provided students in Anchorage the opportunity to observe those challenges in rural Alaska. Each visit allows students to see the opportunity of a career in public health and the village to share their experience with future health leaders.
