

Bachelor of Science Health Sciences

There is a prominent workforce demand for Health Science professionals across Alaska. Career options for individuals interested in pursuing this field are as varied as the landscape of Alaska itself.

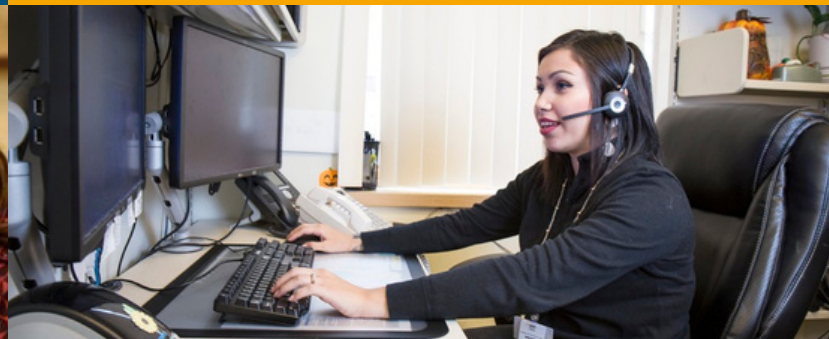

Health Science professionals are committed to improving access and delivery of healthcare services and identifying community healthcare needs.

The B.S. in Health Sciences at APU prepares students to work in health-related fields in several capacities and/or prepares them for graduate study in the health sciences. The program emphasizes cultural safety and is rooted in cultural awareness, cultural competence, and cultural responsiveness.
